Mountain Life Tour

Family Life & Culture in western Franklin County, VA
during height of moonshine era.

Stories of families and events, as told to us.

Remembering: "I can still hear her laughing and singing while doing housework; dark hair piled on top of her head; she was happy and in love with her husband....."

Culture:

Like women everywhere, they craved art—just the medium was different.

Women of this area created their own art; they took great pride in baking the lightest cakes—even when using cast iron pans; sewing intricate quilt pieces; molding butter with pretty designs; putting up glass jars of fruit in deep, rich colors.

Remembering: "He was only a boy, 15 or 16 years old, when caught hauling sugar....."

Families:

Inherited from their ancestors, families had a fierce streak of self-reliance. They farmed and raised children without "government help". Pigs, sheep, beef, cows, chickens, and gardens of vegetables and grains, supplemented by hunting, provided all their food.

Remembering: "A proud woman, she rose early each morning, eager to get her housework done, have breakfast, and walk over Griffith Hill to catch a ride to work at the furniture factory in Bassett—and returning each evening to do it all over again....."
